

wanted, played bridge with her friends weekly and frequently dined out in the evenings with them. She became quite active in the Episcopal Church in Smithfield as might be expected. Shortly before her death, she signed up for a 4-year study course in her church.

She never complained of the infirmities of age and she seldom admitted that she had them. Using her good sense of humor, she kept life in perspective.